

The Saint Bernard Hall of Fame

A True Noble Breed of Dog

THE SAINT BERNARD NATIONAL ARCHIVES &

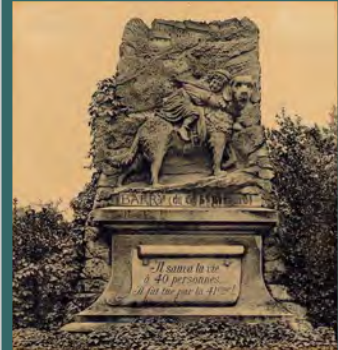

Saint Bernard National Hall of Fame

THE HOSPICE IN SWITZERLAND (Saint Bernard pass in the Swiss Alps) & BARRY

Credited for saving over 40 lives in the Swiss Alps in the 1800s. Let us not forget the roots of our breed and the record of which we are the most proud.

From the time the FIRST traveler was rescued by a Saint Bernard until today, our breed has been setting records and creating goals for others. We don't know who was the first Saint Bernard to make a rescue at the Saint Bernard Pass; that piece of history has been lost in the passage of time. In the United States, we now know of the first Saint Bernards which completed a variety of American Kennel Club titles and other accomplishments. Many of these events and titles are our way of keeping the history of the breed alive. It may not be the act of digging out a lost traveler in the snow, but the events reward and help preserve the conformation, obedience, tracking, agility, weight pulling, draft work and temperament of the Saint Bernard. The dogs in the Saint Bernard National Hall of Fame have set records in many of the different Hall of Fame categories. These records not only give recognition to the dog and handler teams which we can all be proud of, but they also set goals for us to try and achieve or surpass. The goals to preserve, protect and improve the breed we love are never ending.

The Purpose of the Saint Bernard National Archives & Hall of Fame

The Saint Bernard National Archives and Hall of Fame were created with one main goal in mind - to create a composite of records of the breed. Before the establishment of the National Archives, there were no complete sets of records on what the Saint Bernard had accomplished in the United States. Researching over the course of three decades, we now have these records 98% complete, thus having a history of what the Saint Bernard has done in America since 1879. Dogs that have been inducted into the Hall of Fame have been given their recognition and will not be forgotten as time passes. We continue to tabulate and update data on the Saint Bernards' accomplishments in the following categories:
