A TV story about John & Ben with picture of John Circa November 2002

About 2000 dogs representing 150 breeds are putting their best paw forward, competing this weekend at the all-breed dog show at the Civic Auditorium. One of the dogs is among the most successful in the history of the Saint Bernard breed, but this time it wasn't fame or fortune that brought Ben to Omaha, Nebraska. Ben has a winning history, number one in the breed the past four years. He also has the ability to make a dream come true this weekend. Ben's owners brought him here for that reason. "We got a phone call Thursday saying Ben was John's favorite dog," said owner Joe Wolf. So, 865 miles later, Ben was here to meet one of the biggest fans. "He's defeated 26,429 dogs this year." Jon McKeone has helped organize this dog show for the past several years. This year he's taking a back seat. Diagnosed with incurable brain cancer, John is recovering from surgery just a week ago. Joe and his dog Ben are here to help him forget about that and fulfill John's wish to see Ben in person and watch him compete. "Who would drive 16 hours just to bring their dog to show somebody?" said John.

While this wish has already played out perfectly, there's one thing that makes it even more special. Ben won his class Saturday, but placing first can't compare to the rewards to life. "It was a long trip, but it was worth it," said Joe. It's given John a great memory to keep as he faces some tough challenges ahead. "Hopefully I'll be down here next year to set the show up again, if not I'll have seen Ben." John will start chemotherapy in about a week.
